oring Democrats

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 15.—A Democratic influence appeared to be showing the way in the American Legion today with a Democrat enrolled as national commander and a legislative program favoring the Democrats on practically every major issue affecting veterans.

The Legion's fourteenth annual convention went on record on the cash bonus, prohibition, World Court and war debts in such of its opposition against the Republican party. The final touch was the election of Louis A. Johnson, a West Virginia Democrat, as national commander, in as pretty a political coup as was ever staged in even a national political convention.

On the bonus, the Legion demanded immediate cash payment. Both President Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt, his Democratic rival, have declared against it but the Republican party must bear the brunt of Legion opposition on this issue because the administration has persistently fought it.

FOLLOW DEM. PLATFORM
On prohibition, the Legion declared for outright repeal of the eighteenth amendment and of all federal enforcement acts. If the veterans follow this declaration, they must support the Democratic platform, which calls for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, with modification of the Volstead act, because the Republican platform only proposes resubmission.

COMES AS SURPRISE TO SUPERINTENDENT

Only Two Boards, Ashville and Washington-twp, Vote Outright Approval; Several Willing if Others Vote Favorably

There will be no county high school parade at the Pumpkin Show!

This unexpected announcement followed a meeting of superintendents of county high schools and members of boards of education of the county at Hanley's Tea Room, Thursday evening, where it was declared that lack of funds and loss of time in school work would not permit the staging of the parade.

The move came as a surprise to D. L. Buchanan, superintendent of county schools, who has been exerting his efforts in favor of the project and only Thursday evening completed plans with Norwood J. Engle of the Kampamm Costume Works Co. of Columbus to plan the settings and furnish the costumes for the school show.

27 AT MEETING

Twelve superintendents and 14 members of boards of education with Mr. Buchanan made up the meeting which finally decided to overlook the school parade idea. The Pumpkin Show Society had

Ashville Squire Sends 'Fighter' To Workhouse For 855 Days

Hoover Sentences William Amos to Six Months on Each of Two Counts and Fines Him $200 on Each Charge; "Only Way to Stop Fighting," He Says.

Squire J. S. Hoover of Ashville might just as well have been sending William "Bill" Amos to the Ohio penitentiary instead of the workhouse on charges of assault and battery. Thursday afternoon Amos entered a plea of guilty before the 'squire' and before Mr. Hoover had finished passing sentence someone figured that Amos will spend the next two years, four months and 15 days in the Columbus institution.

Amos was held on two counts of fighting and Hoover thought the only way to side-track his pugnacious spirit was to put him away. Accordingly, he sentenced him to six months in the workhouse on each of the two charges and fined him $200 on each charge. The workhouse allows 80 cents per day on a fine.

Sapp charges that during March and April, Ingle, with intent to wickedly and maliciously injure his good name, fame and credit and bring him to public scandal, and disgrace him among his neighbors and citizens, uttered certain scandalous, false, and defamatory words concerning him.

CITES STATEMENTS

He claims the false utterances were intended to make people believe and suspect him guilty of the offense and misconduct charged therein. He states further that the alleged malicious and scandalous declarations on the part of the defendant were made with the purpose to vex, harass and oppress him. The plaintiff claims the statements were made at Bainbridge in the presence of his neighbors and citizens.

Sapp charges that Ingle, in these conversations, accused the plaintiff of being unduly and unlawfully intimate with Ingle's wife and had been guilty of association with her in a clandestine manner on numerous occasions.

ASKS JUDGMENT

The plaintiff says that by reason of these false and malicious statements on Ingle's part he has been and still is greatly injured in his business and has been damaged in the amount for which he asks judgment.

SAFETY CHIEF GIVES ORDERS

Many Objections are Heard to Abandonment of City's Fire Alarm

TO ENFORCE LAWS

Cooperation of Drivers Sought by Crist

Circleville's fire bell will again ring forth beginning Friday—after a suspension of two weeks, and at the same time members of the city police department will begin an attempt to break up the practice of the morbid curiosity seeker who chases after the fire engine.

Both these announcements were made Friday by J. Wallace Crist, safety director, following a study of sentiment for and against the permanent suspension of the alarm system which informs the entire city of fires and of their location.

TAR KETTLE FIRED

The fire department was called to the state highway garage, W. Mound-st., at 3 p. m. Thursday where a tar kettle was on fire. No damage resulted.

The bell was suspended previously because of truck chasing, and because of drivers who pursued to block the city's traffic and rushing pell-mell after the engine. A number of persons, including representatives of several unions, were present at the suspension of the bell, claiming that the safety of property depends largely upon their knowing where the bell is located.

PARENTS OBJECT

Several parents have objected to the suspension of the bell, Crist said, because as soon as they hear the alarm they hurry their children to places of safety from the possible coming of a fire truck.

So, in order to give fire engines every chance to combat fires, the safety director has ordered the police enforcement of traffic laws. The city has an ordinance which calls for the arrest of any automobile driver who chases within 300 feet of the truck. It has another ordinance ordering the arrest of any person who pursues a fire truck. "Neither of these laws have been enforced," Mr. Crist declared today, "but from now on they are going to be. Violation of these ordinances can be the real cause of the suspension of the fire bell but now that we are putting the bell back into use we're going to see that violators are arrested."

HELPED FIREMEN

Suspension of the bell has aided firemen to a great extent because they have been able to gain a start on curious auto drivers, the safety director pointed out. A representative of the Gamewell Alarm System Co. has been contacted and an effort will be made by the city safety department to have alarm turned in from the various call boxes ring in the engine house ten minutes before they ring the bell. At the present time the alarm in the fire station and the huge bell ring at the same time. If the five engine can get a start of two minutes it will be a great advantage. Mr. Crist declared Friday that automobile drivers will greatly assist the fire department if, when they hear the fire bell, they will drive their cars to the nearest curbing to prevent any accidents.

Two prominent Pickaway-co farmers filed deeds of assignment in probate court Thursday.

A. S. "Steve" Jones of Jackson-twp, declared in an assignment that he was unable to pay his debts and obligations. George G. Adkins was named assignee. A statement of assets and liabilities has not been filed yet.

Joseph G. Shortridge of Circleville R. D. 5, filed a similar statement naming Frank Anderson of Jackson-twp, assignee. His personal property amounts to $3,000 and he has a life estate in 398 acres of land in Jackson-twp, his statement asserted. Mr. Anderson has given bond of $6,000 with the U. S. Fidelity and Guaranty Co. as surety.

STORM ENDS HOPE

HORTA, Azores, Sept. 16.—Doubt was expressed here today by Portuguese naval officers that the missing American monoplane "American Nurse," if it was forced down in the vicinity of these islands, could have survived a storm that suddenly broke in the Azores region last night.

Since Miss Edna Newcomer, Williamsport, Pa. nurse, Dr. Leon Picculi, New York and Pilot William Ulbrich on an attempted New York to Rome flight was last sighted 425 miles northwest of the Azores Wednesday morning it has been generally believed that the plane met with mishap somewhere between the islands and the European mainland.

EAGLES LEADER VISITS IN CITY

Henry J. Berrodin of Akron, newly elected Grand Worthly President of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, visited the local lodge Thursday.

SAFETY CHIEF GIVES ORDERS

Many Objections are Heard to Abandonment of City's Fire Alarm

TO ENFORCE LAWS

Cooperation of Drivers
Sought by Crist

Circleville's fire bell will again eal forth-beginning Friday—after a suspension of two weeks, and at the same time members of the city police department will begin an attempt to break up the practice of the morbid curiosity seeker who chases after the fire engine.

Both these announcements were made Friday by J. Wallace Crist, safety director, following a study of sentiment for and against the permanent suspension of the alarm system which informs the entire city of fires and of their location.

TAR KETTLE FIRE

The fire department was called to the state highway garage, W. Mound-st., at 3 p. m. Thursday where a tar kettle was on fire. No damage resulted.

The bell was suspended primarily because of 'truck chasing' automobile drivers who persisted in breaking the city's traffic ordinance by rushing pell-mell after the fire engine. A number of persons, including representatives of the city's several utilities, have objected to the suspension of the bell several claiming that the safety of their property depends largely upon their knowing where the blaze is located.

PARENTS OBJECT

Several parents have objected to the suspension of the bell, Mr. Crist said, because as soon as they hear the alarm they hurry their children to places of safety away from the possible course of the fire truck.

So, in order to give fire-fighters every chance to combat flames the safety director has ordered drastic police enforcement of traffic laws. The city has an ordinance which calls for the arrest of any automobile driver who chases within 300 feet of the truck. It has an other ordinance ordering the arrest of any person who parks too near the fire truck. "Neither of these laws have been enforced," Mr. Crist declared today, "but from now on they are going to be. Violation of these ordinances was the real cause for the suspension of the fire bell but now that we are putting the bell back into use we're going to see that violators are arrested."

HELPED FIREMEN

Suspension of the bell has aided firemen to a great extent because they have been able to gain a start on curious auto drivers, the safety director pointed out. A representative of the Gamewell Alarm System Co. has been contacted and an effort will be made by the city safety department to have alarms turned in from the various call boxes ring in the engine house two minutes before they ring the bell. At the present time the alarm in the fire station and the huge bell ring at the same time. If the fire engine can get a start of two minutes it will be a great advantage. Mr. Crist declared Friday that automobile drivers will greatly assist the fire department if, when they hear the fire bell, they will drive their cars to the nearest curbing to prevent any accidents.

CENTRAL BUCKEYE LEAGUE PROMISES TO BE STRONGER

Coach Herberholz' Squad to Face First Test This Afternoon in Practice Scrimmage; George Speakman May Prove Spark in Lineup; All League Coaches Optimistic

By PAT KIRWIN
As first honest-to-goodness test, an hour's scrimmage session with the Circleville Merchants' team was to be given Coach "Pete" Herberholz' football squad Friday afternoon. Light scrimmage practices have been in order during the past week but the mentor expected Friday afternoon's practice to give him an idea of what he may expect from his Tigers this season. Preparatory practices for Friday's scrimmage session have caused Coach Herberholz to discover what he believes an excellent halfback prospect, George Speakman, a sophomore, with but a year's experience has been showing up beyond expectations. "His tackles are dead, he's improving in ball totting and appears to be moving faster," Herberholz said.

PROSPECTS BRIGHTER

The rest of the team is rounding up in good shape and prospects for the 1932 season appear to be brighter, Herberholz said.

Within a week the football schedule will be in full swing, the opening encounter for the Red and Black coming in a night game at Lancaster next Friday. The Lancasterites, last year's Central Ohio champs, again have a powerful team and the Tigers will probably face the toughest opposition of the year.

The first Central Buckeye League tilt comes as a Pumpkin Show special, Friday, Oct. 7, with Frank Ballenger's Westerville Wildcats. Seven lettermen have reported back to Ballenger this season and it is noted that the Schicks and Shorts are among them. These latter names hint that the Franklin-co aggregation can at least put up a worth-while battle.

GRANDVIEW-SOUTH

Grandview, another of the Tigers' opponents, will see action Friday night when the team meets South High of Columbus. At present Coach Bill Zwick is not so optimistic claiming that injuries will hamper his chances. Bill also finds himself sadly lacking in good reserve backfield talent. Jerry Kingsmore's Marysville eleven will be as tough as ever, with six good lettermen reported back. The Union-co coach always puts a fighting and in most cases powerful team on the field. Mr. Kingsmore says that this year his team has a chance for the championship. Such a statement coming from him generally means something.

BEXLEY STRONG

Engle, Bright, Tudor, Christian, Newburger, M. Stark, Lumbert and Miller, members of last year's Central Buckeye champ team, have reported to Coach Carlton Smith at Bexley. In no uncertain words Mr. Smith has given notice that his Bexley Lions will again be out for victory. His team last year was a machine of power and naturally he expects to put the same type of aggregation on the field this year.

Not so much is known about Erv Carlisle's eleven. What he has left from last year's squad hasn't trickled within distance of Circleville's hearing yet, but it is unofficially reported that his 1932 team will look better than last year's. The local Red and Black will be fighting for revenge when the two teams meet here late in October. Delaware administered

EVANSTON, Ill., Sept. 16.—When the smoke clears away and the 1932 Big Ten schedule has been written into the records, Northwestern will stand out either as the greatest champion in many years or a terrific flop.

There's going to be no middle course for the Dick Hanley edition of 1932. There can't be—not with the sort of schedule Northwestern must play. Here it is—Missouri, Michigan, Illinois, Purdue, Minnesota, Ohio, Notre Dame and Iowa.

Another Rookie Boosts Card 1933 Hope

Ray Starr Joins Dizzy Dean and Tex Carleton As St. Louis Hero.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Although the St. Louis Cardinals have nosedived from the world's championship to seventh place in the National league in a year's time, there are indications that the fading champions will be in the thick of the fight again next year.

Dizzy Dean and Tex Carleton, the youngsters groomed to replace the departed veterans, Grimes and Rhem, have shown signs of real greatness, and now along comes Ray Starr, righthander from the St. Louis farm at Rochester in the International league.

GIVES TWO HITS

Although Starr could do no better than win nine and lose 12 for Rochester this season, he made Frank Merriwell look sick yesterday. Making his big league debut, the young man held the fire-eating Brooklyn Dodgers to two singles yesterday, winning 3 to 0.

The Cubs, who have been losing a flock of close ones, shaded the Giants, 8 to 7, on Kiki Cuyler's homer in the 11th, after the Giants had come from behind and knotted the count three times.

Chicago needs six victories out of 10 remaining games to clinch the pennant, as the Pirates beat the Braves, 3 to 2, behind Meine's pitching. Lloyd Waner hit his 57th double of the season and is only two short of the National league record.

KOENIG RETURN DISCLOSES TALE OF MIGHTY COURAGE

By GENE LAWRENCE
International News Service Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Baseball heroes are a dime a dozen every season, but the name of Mark Koenig will linger long in the memories of present day fans.

Always willing to bestow honors on those who possess an abundance of fighting heart, baseball fans have awarded the lured sprig to Koenig for his gallant comeback this season.

Back in the big leagues as a member of a club headed toward a pennant and possibly world's series honors, Koenig has waged the gamut fight in the annals of modern baseball. Any glory he may reap will be nothing less than just reward for his heart-breaking battle that carried him from oblivion in the minors to a prominent spot in the big league limelight.

DOWN THEN BACK

All in the space of one season Koenig has slipped from the big leagues to the minors and back to a berth in the majors. Falling eyesight caused by sinus trouble put Mark on the down grade and he was sent by the Detroit Tigers early this season to the San Francisco Missions.

Most baseball players would be through after such a setback, but not Koenig. Before he reported to the Coast team he underwent an operation that restored his sight to normalcy. On the Coast he was a sensation from the start. Hitting and fielding in big league style he attracted the attention of scouts from the American and National Leagues.

While a few clubs were planning to get Koenig for the 1933 season, the Chicago Cubs stepped in and bought him for $10,000. And what a buy at that price.

HAS BEEN COG

He has more than earned his purchase price for the Cubs, with his work since he joined Chicago a little over a month ago. His fielding steadied the Cubs infield and his hitting has won more than one game for them in their march toward the National League pennant.

With Koenig at shortstop manager Charlie Grimm found that many of the rough sports in the defensive playing of the Cubs' infield were ironed out by his experience and steadiness. Young Billy Herman at third base settled down and played like a real veteran with Mark alongside of him.

Only a youngster in years, twenty eight, Mark is a real veteran in experience. This is his eighth season in the big leagues, five of which he played with the New York Yankees and the other two with the Detroit Tigers. He has taken part in three world's series as a member of the Yankees, and the experience gained in the 1926-27-28 classics should prove invaluable again this fall.

Koenig has made the most of his opportunities since he started his successful comeback, but he has his biggest chance in the palm of his hand right now.

Playing against his former team mates in the 1932 series he can win undying fame for himself by playing the same kind of baseball that has carried him back to the top. And that brand of baseball was well nigh perfect and seasonal.

RICHARDS SOLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Paul Richards, leading catcher of the American association, has been purchased from the Minneapolis club by the New York Giants, it was announced today. He will not report to the Giants until 1933.

REAL PRACTICE BEGINS ON OHIO SCHOOL 'GRIDS'

Injuries Reported At Akron U., Sinter Catches Coach Peden's Eye.

BY I. N. S.
Thud! Bump! They're scrimmaging on Ohio's collegiate grids.

The scrubs and the regulars started their practice battles in earnest all over the state today as coaches announced that their candidates are in shape to take some knocks in preparation for real games to be played within two or three weeks. Accompanying reports of scrimmages came reports of injuries.

In one of the clashes played without benefit of spectators and cheer leaders, Lloyd Mayer, halfback, and Whitely Laughlin, tackle, wrenched shoulders at Akron university. Bill Pifer, 225-pound sophomore tackle from Kalamazoo, Mich., wrenched a shoulder at a scrimmage at Wittenberg.

BROWN, SINTIC RUN
Coach Don Peden, tutor of the speedy Ohio university team, inaugurated scrimmaging with his quad yesterday, and found Brown and Sinter could get away for long runs. Peden's sophomores, in particular, showed up well.

Other training camp reports follow:
ALLIANCE—Coach George Geltz reported the discovery of a fullback "find" in Ashley Lyon, Poland, O., sophomore.

CINCINNATI—To improve their wind, 11 Xavier backfield candidates were sent trotting around the track all afternoon during yesterday's practice by Coach Meyer. In the neighboring University of Cincinnati camp, a spirited contest was started between Roy Fitzgerald and Ed Siding for quarterback. Bill Gillian and Carl Kemmerly are leading candidates for fullback.

BOWLING GREEN—Headed by End Don Stevenson, Halfbacks Ford Murray and Willard Schaller and Guard Carlisle Kennedy, 26 candidates reported for practice at Bowling Green state college.

TIFFIN—Heidelberg still had four "holdouts" today. For various reasons, Coach Ted Turney's squad was still without the services of John Zipfel, lineman; Spuhler, back, and Klingman and Brand, 1931 freshman stars. Art Headlough, Akron back; Wendell Sweet, Cleveland center; and Carl McElheny and Burdett Corhill, Tiffin guards, reported yesterday, increasing the squad to 32 members.

WOOSTER—Skull practice was launched by Coach L. C. Boles following intensive signal practice yesterday. After the signal drill, Boles led the athletes to a classroom where he gave a blackboard demonstration of the offensive plays he plans to use this year.

CRISLER PLEASED

PRINCETON, Sept. 16.—Coach H. O. Crisler, Princeton's new football mentor, today said he was pleased with his squad's first work out. Seventy men turned out for the drill yesterday.

SUMNER, Ia.—When a mother possum was run over and killed by an automobile, a dog, Brownie, which is owned by Harold Traeger here, adopted the four young possums, and raised them.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Baseball heroes are a dime a dozen every season, but the name of Mark Koenig will linger long in the memories of percent day fans.
Always willing to bestow honors on those who possess an abundance of fighting heart, baseball fans have awarded the lured spring to Koenig for his gallant comeback this season.

Back in the big leagues as a member of a club headed toward a pennant and possibly world's series honors, Koenig has waged the gamut fight in the annals of modern baseball. Any glory he may reap will be nothing less than just reward for his heart-breaking battle that carried him from oblivion in the minors to a prominent spot in the big league limelight.

DOWN THEN BACK

All in the space of one season Koenig has slipped from the big leagues to the minors and back to a berth in the majors. Failing eyesight caused by sinus trouble put Mark on the down grade and he was sent by the Detroit Tigers early this season to the San Francisco Missions.

Most baseball players would be through after such a setback, but not Koenig. Before he reported to the Coast team he underwent an operation that restored his sight to normalcy. On the Coast he was a sensation from the start. Hitting and fielding in big league style he attracted the attention of scouts from the American and National Leagues.

While a few clubs were planning to get Koenig for the 1933 season, the Chicago Cubs stepped in and bought him for $10,000. And what a buy at that price.

HAS BEEN COG

He has more than earned his purchase price for the Cubs, with his work since he joined

Chicago a little over a month ago. His fielding at the Cubs infield and his hitting has won more than one game for them in their march toward the National League pennant.
With Koenig at shortstop, manager Charlie Grimm found that many of the rough sports in the defense playing of the Cubs' infield were ironed out by his experience and steadiness. Young Billy Herman at third base settled down and played like a real veteran with Mark alongside of him.

Only a youngster in years, twenty-eight Mark is a real veteran in experience. This is his eighth season in the big leagues, five of which he played with the New York Yankees and the other two with the Detroit Tigers. He has taken part in three world series, as a member of the Yankees, and the experience gained in the 1926-27-28 classics should prove invaluable again this fall.

Koenig has made the most of his opportunities since he started his successful comeback but he has his biggest chance in the palm of his hand right now.

Playing against his former teammates in the 1932 series he can win undying fame for himself by playing the same kind of baseball that has carried him back to the top. And that brand of baseball is well high perfect and seasons-old.

RICHARDS SOLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Paul Richards, leading pitcher of the American association, has been purchased from the Tidewater club by the New York Giants. It was announced today. He will report to the Giants until 1933.

REAL PRACTICE BEGINS ON OHIO SCHOOL 'GRIDS'

Injuries Reported At Akron U., Sincic Catches Coach Peden's Eye.

BY I. N. S.
Thud! Bump! They're scrimmaging on Ohio's collegiate grids.
The scrubs and the regulars started their practice battles in earnest all over the state today as coaches announced that their candidates are in shape to take some knocks in preparation for real games to be played within two or three weeks. Accompanying reports of scrimmages came reports of injuries.

In one of the classics played without benefit of spectators and cheer leaders, Lloyd Mayer, halfback, and Whitey Laughlin, tackle, wrenched shoulders at Akron university. Bill Pifer, 225-pound sophomore tackle from Kalamazoo, Mich., wrenched a shoulder at a scrimmage at Wittenberg.

BROWN, SINTIC RUN
Coach Don Peden, tutor of the speedy Ohio university team, inaugurated scrimmage with his quad yesterday and found Brown and Sincic could get away for long runs. Pepen's sophomores, in particular, showed up well.

Other training camp reports follow.
ALLIANCE—Coach George Gertz reported the discovery of a fullback "find" in Ashley Lyon, Poland, C., sophomore.

CINCINNATI—To improve their wind, 11 Xavier backfield candidates were sent trotting around the track all afternoon during yesterday's practice by Coach Meyer. In the neighboring University of Cincinnati camp a spirited contest was started between Roy Fitzgerald and Ed Siding for quarterback. Bill Gilman and Carl Kennedy are leading candidates for fullback.

BOWLING GREEN—Headed by End Don Stevenson, Halfbacks Ford Murray and Willard Schaller and Guard Carlyle Kennedy, 26 candidates reported for practice at Bowling Green state college.

TIFFIN—Heidelberg still had four "holdouts" today. For various reasons Coach Ted Turney's squad was still without the services of John Zipfel, lineman, Spuhler, back, and Kling and Brand, 1931 freshman stars. Art Headlough, Akron back, Wendell Sweet, Cleveland center, and Carl McElhenry and Burdett Corbitt, Tiffin guards, reported yesterday, increasing the squad to 32 members.

WOOSTER—Skull practice was launched by Coach L. C. Bolas following intensive signal practice yesterday. After the signal drill, Bolas led the athletes to a classroom where he gave a blackboard demonstration of the offensive plays he plans to use this year.

CRISLER PLEASED

PRINCETON, Sept. 16.—Coach H. O. Crisler, Princeton's new football mentor today said he was pleased with his squad's first work out. Seventy men turned out for the drill yesterday.

SUMNER Ia.—When a mother possum was run over and killed by an automobile, a dog, Brownie, which is owned by Harold Traeger here, adopted the four young possums, and raised them.

SOYBEANS, COWPEAS AND OTHER CHEAP, NUTRITIOUS BEAN CROPS

Some of the most nutritious vegetable foods for human beings are often grown primarily for other purpose, coming but gradually into table use. Or sometimes a scarcity of other food speeds up the recognition of the kinds least known, which may thus be cheaper because so long ignored.
This is true of the soybeans in the United States, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and to a considerable extent it is true of the common cowpea. In this country both of these excellent foods are grown chiefly as clover crops, or as feed for farm livestock. The soybean in its native Orient, however, ranks next to rice as a food crop, and because of its high protein value, is the oriental substitute for meat.

The cowpea, common in the southern part of the United States, is grown there primarily for forage and soil enrichment, but it is eaten in considerable quantities, and one variety, the black-eyed pea, is grown for market. Thus the soybean and the cowpea furnish a valuable food which as a sort of by-product is very cheap in the districts where these crops are grown. Soybeans and cowpeas are also on sale in the stores and markets in some communities.

The soybean is so rich in high quality protein, and contains so much fat, that oriental people make substitutes for milk and for cheese from the ground beans. It is also rich in calcium and food iron, and has a considerable vitamin content especially of vitamin B. But soybeans contain only a trace of starch, and can therefore be used in the same meal with rice, hominy grits, or other starchy foods. Because of their lack of starch, soybeans have been recommended as food for diabetics, and soybean meal and bread are made and sold for this purpose.

Yellow, brown, and green varieties of soybeans are excellent for use as green vegetables and can be cooked like Lima beans or any other of the varieties of bean used green. The green beans shell more easily if the pods are first boiled for about three minutes. The average cooking time (boiling or steaming) for the green beans is about 50 minutes, and may then be served simply with melted butter or white sauce, or they may be scalloped, or used in salad. Scalloped green soybeans with tomatoes or tomato sauce is another good variation.

Dried soybeans can be prepared in much the same way as navy and other dried beans. The dried soybeans, however, require longer soaking and much more cooking than the familiar varieties of beans. In general, dried soybeans should be soaked 24 hours and cooked for at least two hours. The time varies considerably, however, with the dryness of the bean and the variety. As a rule, it is better to simmer than to boil soybeans rapidly. Since they are very rich in fat, they do not require additional fat in cooking, but some persons prefer to add a little meat fat or butter because of the flavor.

Actor-Politician and Booster

Although Mitchell Lewis, screen actor, does not go over big with Lupe Velez when, as the desperado in a film plot, he pursues the fair maiden, she is one of his greatest boosters off the lot. Besides being an actor, Lewis is a politician and is a candidate from Hollywood for the California Legislature. Miss Velez is here shown with Lewis as they took time out from shooting a scene to examine one of the latter's campaign posters.

Soybean sprouts make a good green salad for winter. The sprouting may be done in the kitchen by first soaking the beans over night, and then putting the dried beans in a strainer or colander, in which they are kept covered, in a warm place, and are flooded with warm water four or five times a day.

The sprouts will appear in four to six days, and should be used when they are about an inch long.

All the beans and peas belong to that highly useful group of plants called legumes. Their peculiar value lies in the variety of food substances they contain, and in their cheapness. All are rich in protein (though not the "complete" proteins of milk, cheese, and meat), iron, phosphorus, and vitamin B. None, however, are so rich in these values as the soybean.

Cowpeas are usually served just as other beans and peas are served. Boiled or baked or scalloped cowpeas, with strips of bacon across the top, make a highly nutritious and very appetizing main dish for a meatless meal.

At this time of year there are other incidental crops of beans that are worth remembering. These are the late garden beans of different varieties—"horticultural beans," "Kentucky wonders," "yard long beans," "lazy wife," "cornfield beans," and other beans that have matured on the vines but are not thoroughly dried. These are easily shelled and require much less cooking time than dried beans. They may be seasoned with butter or served with white sauce or tomato sauce, as suggested for soybeans.

CEREAL RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought New Health

Every one who has suffered from constipation should read Mr. P. M. Fisher's letter:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and used, for relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days' treatment, I would only find my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly, once a day as directed. Since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the desired result, and it keeps me in a very healthful condition."—Mr. P. M. Fisher, 352 Evergreen Place, Ridgewood, N. J.

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines; Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN supplies both—and also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in lettuce. Inside the body, it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

How much safer this is than risk-taking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Scalloped Green Soybeans
3 cups green soybeans.
Water.
3 cups milk.
6 tablespoons fat.
6 tablespoons flour.
1 cup bread crumbs.
1 teaspoon salt.
Pepper.

Cook the beans until soft (probably 50 minutes). Heat the milk to scalding point and thicken with a paste made from the fat and flour. Add this to the beans together with the seasonings. Place in a baking dish and cover with bread crumbs. Bake until crumbs are browned and mixture is heated through.

Scalloped Peas, Rice, and Tomatoes
2 cups cooked cowpeas (black-eyed or other variety).
2 cups boiled rice.
2-1/2 cups tomatoes (cooked, canned, or sliced raw).
1 medium-sized onion.
2 tablespoons fat.
1 tablespoon salt.
Pepper to taste.
1-2 cup bread crumbs.
Mix together all the ingredients except the bread crumbs. Put the mixture into a greased baking dish and sprinkle the bread crumbs over the top. Bake in a moderately hot oven for about 35 minutes or until thoroughly heated through and the crumbs are brown. If desired serve with brown sauce.

Brown Sauce
1 tablespoon chopped onion.
2 tablespoons fat.
2 tablespoons flour.
1 cup milk.
Salt and pepper to taste.
Cook the onion in the fat for a few minutes, add the flour and stir until lightly browned. Add the milk gradually and stir until the sauce thickens. Season with salt and pepper.

There Ought to Be a Law

AUDITORS figure that creditors and investors, stand to lose around two billions of dollars in the involved manipulations of the now thoroughly discredited Samuel Insull of Chicago and his midwest utilities companies.

This gigantic loss, as well as that of the notorious Ivar Kreuger, once thought a match king, cannot be explained by the depression. In both cases as well as in many others, there are good grounds for charges of deliberate manipulation merely to bet the public's money.

These losses represent thousands of fortunes for frugal hard-working investors who saved and invested for old age and now find themselves without financial resources. The Insull and Kreuger collapses stimulate a growing distrust of the public in so-called big business men and indicate that some captains of industry are not as smart or as honest as they have been portrayed.

At any rate it would not seem amiss to pass a few more laws and really try, at least, to protect the honest investor.

To Roosevelt Speech

"BUNK" says the Republican politicians and "great" says the Democratic politicians in describing Candidate Franklin D. Roosevelt's farm relief speech at Topeka yesterday. A midwest farm leader, Milo Reno, of the holiday strike association, believes the program outlined by Gov. Roosevelt would solve the farm problem "if properly administered."

Gov. Roosevelt emphasized two well recognized facts. One is that the tax burden on real estate is becoming too heavy for the farmer. And the other is that tariff bills in the past have not accorded to agriculture the same protection given to industry. Tariff laws have been made by manufacturers whose interests have been to secure cheap food for their workmen.

Manufacturers have always been better organized than the farmer and, of course, can control their business better. They are not subject to weather conditions and one manufacturer can speak and donate to campaign funds, for 5,000 or 10,000 or more people in his organization, while each individual farm owner can only speak for himself and possibly a few farm hands at the most.

For this reason the farmer is a difficult problem. From the standpoint of restoring buying power and thus ending the depression and as a tax source the nation cannot afford to ignore the goose that lays the golden egg.

But there is more to farm relief than easing taxes and protective tariff. Somehow, some way, there must arise among the agrarian classes a method of regulating crop supply to adjust more reasonably with demand. Even behind a tariff wall there can be ruinous over-production. Farm leaders cannot agree on this phase. President Hoover's farm board has been costly and has had little apparent effect.

It is possible that some day the farm cooperative companies may become gigantic farm unions not unlike the American Federation of Labor, advocating shorter hours and restrictions on machinery.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COVET-FRIED, INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady", is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box found outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose photograph is found in Lola's room, and whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name, "Basil". At the mention of "Basil", Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confesses she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest. Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to place it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight New Year's Eve, and then went for a ride on the Motor Parkway, alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edgar, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. The Commissioner telephones the Rochester police to get Edward on the phone and watch him while the news is broken to him.

CHAPTER TWENTY

AS the long-distance conversation ended, the work of the vacuum cleaners was getting underway. Instantly the pent-house of Lola Carewe was filled with a weird sound. At that dark hour the moaning whine, the wheezing roar of those vacuum cleaners operated by two young detectives from Center Street echoed mournfully through the rooms. Every particle of dust in the room where the crime had been done was being garnered into those blatted pouches. Millions of infinite particles were being bagged like so much game for the hunter, treasure dust in the man-hunt. Somewhere in the multitudes of particles, there might lie, invisible to the naked eye, a vital clue. To some police detectives the carpet sweeper is a tool as indispensable as the magnifying glass, the tape measure, and the ink of the finger-print man.

But District Attorney Dougherty viewed the two machines with a bilious eye. "Colt," he exclaimed, with a reproachful glance back over his shoulder, "I didn't know you had gone in for this sort of thing."

"Ever hear of it before?" "Oh, I've read about the Viennese police doing something of the kind. But it all seems very faddistic to me. If you don't mind my saying so, I don't believe you can solve crimes by looking at sweepings under a microscope."

"But Mr. Dougherty—" I started to protest. "Any more," insisted the District Attorney, crushing me with a glance, "than I believe you can tell fortunes with tea-leaves."

Colt smiled but did not reply. He went to the telephone and called a Morningside number. His conversation was revealing.

"Hello, Professor Lechner. I am sorry to get you out of bed. This is Thatcher Colt. I am engaged on a very mysterious case, and I want to send you some specimens for analysis. Bags of dust—and the clothing of two murdered girls. Could you start in right away? I can have them there in an hour."

"Thank you."

As he hung up the receiver, Colt turned to Flynn.

"As soon as ready, send the vacuum cleaner bags and all the clothes of the two girls to the apartment of Morningside Heights. The men need not wait there."

"Right!"

Colt turned away. His dark brows were concentrated in an unaccustomed frown. I saw that some facet of this double riddle had assumed immense importance in his eyes. Perhaps it was only guesswork, but I had a hunch that the chief was still preoccupied with the problem of those strange markings on the neck of Christine Quires.

With an abstracted air, he crossed the living-room and passed down the corridor to the foyer and the front door. Dougherty was about to follow but I motioned to him to remain. Together we stood by the fireplace, smoking cigarettes.

"What is he looking for?" rumbled Dougherty out of the corner of his mouth, after five minutes of silence.

"The murderer!" I grinned. At that moment, Colt reappeared in the doorway. His clothing was wet, his black hair tousled. He had been out on the terrace. His eyes were set in an intent gaze that was almost somnambulistic in its complete concentration. Never had I seen the chief so deeply immersed in a problem. With slow, plodding steps he traversed the living-room—and then, suddenly, I realized what it was he doing.

He was retracing his own itinerary, just as we had followed Lola Carewe hours ago on a tour through the rooms of the apartment.

What was the purpose of this steady retracing of old steps? I watched, fascinated—I had not seen Thatcher Colt in this strange mood before. The personal challenge, perhaps, the very imperativeness of these murders, had brought him to a high pitch of determined effort.

To the kitchen he went, and from there through room after room. We did not follow him, but we could hear him, poking about in closets, and opening boxes and trunks, even lifting windows and trying doors.

Finally he came back to us, having completed the circuit and re-examined all the rooms. As he entered the drawing-room, I saw him thrust some large object into the left pocket of his trousers. It made a noticeable bulge.

But of this object which he had concealed, Thatcher Colt made no mention at the moment. Instead he held out his right hand, on which lay a long, golden strand of hair—from the head of a woman.

"Does that mean anything to you?" he asked, his voice brittle, unnaturally calm. I saw that he had not looked in vain; he had made discoveries and he considered them important.

"It is a hair, the color of Christine's hair," declared Dougherty. "Where did you find it?"

"On the floor—in Lola's room."

"But how could you find a thing like this—a thin strand of hair?" "Because I knew where to look," answered Colt grimly. "It was near a window."

"A terrace window?" "No, Dougherty—one that opens on a straight drop of twenty-three stories to the street."

Dougherty ran a thick hand through his mop of red curls. His blue eyes, bedeviled, rolled unhappily. "How, Thatcher—" he protested.

But Colt, having turned the strand of hair over to me, was already at the guest-room door, talking to Flynn. I found an envelope, put the hair in it, marked the envelope and put it in my pocket.

"Leave a good man in charge when you go back to Headquarters," the chief was telling Flynn. "I shall be at my home. If the Rochester call comes, switch it there. And keep me posted."

In silence, Dougherty and I followed Colt down the corridor toward the foyer. But midway in the passage, the Commissioner paused and faced about. "I had forgotten something," he murmured. "Something important."

Returning to the living-room, he crossed to what had been the boudoir of Lola Carewe and knocked. Dorothy Lox opened the door.

"On the dresser," directed the Commissioner, without entering, "there is a framed picture of a young man. May I have the picture?"

"No," protested a cross old voice from within. "That's Lola's picture and I'm going to see to it; it goes into her coffin."

"There's plenty of time for that," answered Colt. "Let's have the picture."

There was no further protest. With the framed portrait in his hands, Colt went to a small table in the living-room. There, with his gloved hands, he pried at the back of the frame and finally it fell apart in his hands, frame, glass, backing and photograph.

It was the picture itself that he wanted. Holding it up to the light, he studied the photographer's trademark at the lower part of the cardboard mount.

"Marcel Grandon, 60, Avenue D'Iena," he repeated aloud. "I can remember that."

Deliberately he reassembled the pieces into order and then put the framed picture on my hands.

"You take charge of that, Tony," he instructed. "I'll tell you what to do with it later."

On the first landing, Colt stopped. "Tony," he said, "I am sending you down to Headquarters with several things of the utmost importance to this case. Listen carefully, for if my instructions are carried out, I believe we can break this case in twenty-four hours!"

"What are the things?" blurted Dougherty, rubbing his hands with curiosity.

From the breast pocket of his evening coat Colt drew forth a bulky object, wrapped in a handkerchief.

"Take this down to Headquarters," the Commissioner directed, while Dougherty eyed the innervar bundle with pudgy suspicion.

"Have its contents analyzed at once. You may show it to Mr. Dougherty—handle it carefully."

I drew back the silken folds of the handkerchief. There in my hand lay the hypodermic syringe and needle which Doctor Baldwin had used, just before Lola Carewe breathed her last!

It was the syringe, then, that Colt had lifted from the medicine case. Had Baldwin noticed? Surely he had not forgotten such an important accessory! Or had he done just that, swept along in the excitement?

The possibility that Doctor Baldwin had had a hand in the death of Lola or Christine seemed remote to the point of absurdity. What opportunity had there been?

But I had no time then for idle speculation. From the left-hand pocket of his trousers, Colt took out a coil of brown leather strap. I had a hunch at the end—the kind of strap used on trunks. I noticed that the strap had recently been wet.

"What's that for?" rumbled Dougherty, ogling the strap suspiciously.

"You will take this down to Doctor Multooler," resumed Colt crisply. "Tell him I want it turned over for a laboratory analysis. Also have that strand of hair identified as belonging to Christine."

"And the frame?" I prompted. Colt smiled at the framed picture as at an old friend.

"You are to take the picture," he added. "To Mr. Gavin, the telegraph manager in Headquarters. Tell him I want that picture sent to M. Duport, head of the Paris police force, tonight—by telephoto. Clear?"

"Clear, chief!"

"When you are through, Tony join Dougherty and me at my house!"

Cataract, Eye Affliction, Cured by Simple Operation

This Optic Condition, Commonly Met in Old Age, Can Now Be Removed Without Danger; Don't Delay If Surgery Has Been Advised.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Dr. Copeland

WITHIN recent years a great deal of scientific research has been devoted to discovering the cause and prevention of cataract. Most authorities believe that the disease is brought about by some chemical change within the body. It is usually associated with advancing years. As we grow older, deposits of opaque material may occur in the crystalline lens of the eye. This condition produces a haziness of the vision in the afflicted eye.

Cataract is most commonly seen in old age, although it may occur in the young, at birth even. It is often seen accompanying certain general diseases. It is exceedingly common in elderly people suffering from diabetes.

It may follow the taking of certain poisons, such as ergot and naphthalin. They interfere somehow in the nutrition of the lens of the eye. The accumulated poisons attack this delicate structure.

Cataract may occur as the result of a blow or other injury to the eye. This is called "traumatic cataract." In this type the haziness is due to a rupture of the capsule of the eye. This break permits the watery fluid within the eyeball to enter the crystalline lens, producing cloudiness. Immediate medical attention is necessary in an accident of this sort.

There Ought to Be a Law

AUDITORS figure that creditors and investors, stand to lose around two billions of dollars in the involved manipulations of the now thoroughly discredited Samuel Insull of Chicago and his midwest utilities companies.

This gigantic loss, as well as that of the notorious Ivar Kreuger, once thought a match king, cannot be explained by the depression. In both cases, as well as in many others, there are good grounds for charges of deliberate manipulation merely to bet the public's money.

These losses represent thousands of fortunes for frugal hard-working investors who saved and invested for old age and now find themselves without financial resources.

The Insull and Kreuger collapses stimulate a growing distrust of the public in so-called big business men and indicate that some capitalists are not as smart or as honest as they have been portrayed.

At any rate it would not seem amiss to pass a few more laws and really try, at least, to protect the honest investor.

To Roosevelt Speech

"BUNK" says the Republican politicians and great says the Democratic politicians in describing Candidate Franklin D. Roosevelt's farm relief speech at Topeka yesterday. A midwest farm leader, Milo Reno, of the holiday strike association, believes the program outlined by Gov. Roosevelt would solve the farm problem "if properly administered."

Gov. Roosevelt emphasized two well recognized facts. One is that the tax burden on real estate is becoming too heavy for the farmer. And the other is that tariff bills in the past have not accorded to agriculture the same protection given to industry. Tariff laws have been made by manufacturers whose interests have been to secure cheap food for their workmen.

Manufacturers have always been better organized than the farmer and of course they are not subject to weather conditions and one manufacturer can speak and donate to campaign funds, for 5,000 or 10,000 or more people in his organization, while each individual farm owner can only speak for himself and possibly a few farm hands at the most.

For this reason the farmer is a difficult problem. From the standpoint of restoring buying power and thus ending the depression and as a tax source the nation cannot afford to ignore the goose that lays the golden egg.

But there is more to farm relief than easing taxes and protective tariff. Somehow, somehow, there must arise among the agrarian classes a method of regulating crop supply to adjust more reasonably with demand. Even behind a tariff wall there can be ruinous overproduction. Farm leaders cannot agree on this phase. President Hoover's farm board has been costly and has had little apparent effect.

It is possible that some day the farm cooperative companies may become gigantic farm unions not unlike the American Federation of Labor, advocating shorter hours and restrictions on machinery.

MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY CONVIC-FRIEDLE INC. DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Following the receipt of a death threat, Lola Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady", is mysteriously slain in her penthouse apartment at 3 a. m. New Year's Eve. Dr. Hugh Baldwin reports death due to heart failure. The only clue to the murderer is a medical laboratory specimen box found outside Lola's window. Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt attaches importance to the young man whose photograph is found in Lola's room, and whose identity Lola had refused to reveal beyond his first name, "Basil". Mrs. Carewe, Lola's mother, becomes hysterical. It is known that Lola quarreled with Guy Everett and Vincent Rowland, a lawyer, over investments. Eunice, the maid, confesses she was employed by Everett to report the goings on in the apartment. The mystery deepens with the finding of the body of Christine Quires, Lola's guest. Christine had been killed before Lola and her body hidden until an opportune moment arrived for the murderer to place it, soaking wet, in Lola's room. The findings are similar to those in Lola's case except that Christine's neck was bruised after death. Everett, Christine's last escort, claims he left her at the apartment elevator at midnight New Year's Eve, and then went for a ride on the Motor Parkway, alone, arriving home after 3 a. m. Mrs. Carewe informs Colt that Christine lived with a brother, Edgar, in Rochester, and was to receive her inheritance shortly. The Commissioner telephones the Rochester police to get Edward on the phone and watch him while the news is broken to him.

CHAPTER TWENTY

As the long-distance conversation ended, the work of the vacuum cleaners was getting underway. Instantly the pent-house of Lola Carewe was filled with a weird sound. At that dark hour the moaning whine, the wheezing drone of those vacuum cleaners operated by two young detectives from Center Street echoed mournfully through the rooms. Every particle of dust in the room where the crime had been done was being garnered into those bloated pouches. Millions of infinite particles were being bagged like so much game for the hunter, treasure dust in the man-hunt. Somewhere in the multitudes of particles there might lie, invisible to the naked eye, a vital clue. To some police detectives the carpet sweeper is a tool as indispensable as the magnifying glass, the tape measure, and the ink of the finger-print man.

But District Attorney Dougherty viewed the two machines with a bilious eye.

"Colt," he exclaimed, with a reproachful glance back over his shoulder, "I don't know you had gone in for this sort of thing."

"Over here of it before?"

"Oh, I've read about the Viennese police doing something of the kind. But it all seems very faddistic to me. If you don't mind my saying so, I don't believe you can solve crimes by looking at sweepings under a microscope."

"But Mr. Dougherty—" I started to protest.

"Any more," insisted the District Attorney, crushing me with a glance, "than I believe you can tell fortunes with tea-leaves."

Colt smiled but did not reply. He went to the telephone and called a Morningside number. His conversation was revealing.

"Hello, Professor Luckner. I am sorry to get you out of bed. This is Thatcher Colt. I am engaged on a very mysterious case, and I want to send you some specimens for analysis. Bags of dust—and the clothing of two murdered girls. Could you start in right away? I can have them there in an hour."

"Thank you."

As he hung up the receiver, Colt turned to Flynn.

"As soon as ready, send the vacuum cleaner bags and all the clothes of the two girls to the apartment of Morningside Heights. The men need not wait there."

"Right!"

Colt turned away. His dark brows were concentrated in an unaccustomed frown. I saw that some facet of this double riddle had assumed immense importance in his eyes. Perhaps it was only guesswork, but I had a hunch that the chief was still preoccupied with the problem of those strange markings on the neck of Christine Quires. With an abstracted air, he crossed the living-room and passed down the corridor to the foyer and the front door. Dougherty was about to follow him I motioned to him to remain. Together we stood by the fireplace, smoking cigarettes.

"What is he looking for?" rumbled Dougherty out of the corner of his mouth, after five minutes of silence.

"The murderer!" I grinned.

At that moment, Colt reappeared in the doorway. His clothing was wet, his black hair tousled. He had been out in the terrace. His eyes were set in an intent gaze that was almost somnambulistic in its complete concentration. Never had I seen the chief so deeply immersed in a problem. With slow, plodding steps he traversed the living-room and then, suddenly, I realized what it was he was doing.

He was retracing his own itinerary, just as we had followed Lola Carewe hours ago on a tour through the rooms of the apartment.

What was the purpose of this steady retracing of old steps? I watched, fascinated—I had not seen Thatcher Colt in this strange mood before. The personal challenge, perhaps, the very impertinence of these murders, had brought him to a high pitch of determined effort.

To the kitchen he went, and from there through room after room. We did not follow him, but we could hear him, poking about in closets, and opening boxes and trunks, even lifting windows and trying doors.

Finally he came back to us, having completed the circuit and examined all the rooms. As he entered the drawing-room, I saw him thrust some large object into the left pocket of his trousers. It made a noticeable bulge.

But of this object which he had concealed, Thatcher Colt made no mention at the moment. Instead he held out his right hand, on which lay a long, golden strand of hair—from the head of a woman.

"Does that mean anything to you?" he asked, his voice brittle, unnaturally calm. I saw that he had not looked in vain; he had made discoveries and he considered them important.

"It is a hair, the color of Christine's hair," declared Dougherty. "Where did you find it?"

"On the floor—in Lola's room."

"But how could you find a thing like this—a thin strand of hair?"

"Because I knew where to look," answered Colt grimly. "It was near a window."

"A terrace window?"

"No, Dougherty—one that opens on a straight drop of twenty-three stories to the street."

Dougherty ran a thick hand through his mop of red curls. His blue eyes, bedeviled, rolled unhappily.

"How, Thatcher?" he protested.

But Colt, having turned the strand of hair over to me, was already at the guest-room door, talking to Flynn. I found an envelope, put the hair in it, marked the envelope and put it in my pocket.

"Leave a good man in charge when you go back to Headquarters," the chief was telling Flynn. "I shall be at my home. If the Rochester call comes, switch it there. And keep me posted."

In silence, Dougherty and I followed Colt down the corridor toward the foyer. But midway in the passage, the Commissioner paused and faced about.

"I had forgotten something," he murmured. "Something important." Returning to the living-room, he crossed to what had been the boudoir of Lola Carewe and knocked. Dorothy Lox opened the door.

"On the dresser," directed the Commissioner, without entering, "there is a framed picture of a young man. May I have the picture?"

"No," protested a cross old voice from within. "That's Lola's picture and I'm going to see to it; it goes into her coffin."

"There's plenty of time for that," answered Colt. "Let's have the picture."

There was no further protest. With the framed portrait in his hands, Colt went to a small table in the living-room. There, with his gloved hands, he pried at the back of the frame and finally it fell apart in his hands, frame, glass, backing and photograph.

It was the picture itself that he wanted. Holding it up to the light, he studied the photographer's trademark at the lower part of the card-board mount.

"Marcel Grandon, 60, Avenue D'Ena," he repeated aloud. "I can remember that."

Deliberately he reassembled the pieces into order and then put the framed picture into my hands.

"You take charge of that, Tony," he instructed. "I'll tell you what to do with it later."

On the first landing, Colt stopped. "Tony," he said, "I am sending you down to Headquarters with several things of the utmost importance to this case. Listen carefully, for if my instructions are carried out, I believe we can break this case in twenty-four hours!"

"What are the things?" blurted Dougherty, rubbing his heads with curiosity.

From the breast pocket of his evening coat Colt drew forth a bulky object, wrapped in a handkerchief.

"Take this down to Headquarters," the Commissioner directed, while Dougherty eyed the triangular bundle with pudgy suspicion. "Have its contents analyzed at once. You may show it to Mr. Dougherty—handle it carefully."

I drew back the silken folds of the handkerchief. There in my hand lay the hypodermic syringe and needle which Doctor Baldwin had used, just before Lola Carewe breathed her last!

It was the syringe, then, that Colt had lifted from the medicine case. Had Baldwin noticed? Surely, he had not forgotten such an important accessory! Or had he done just that, swept along in the excitement?

The possibility that Doctor Baldwin had had a hand in the death of Lola or Christine seemed remote to the point of absurdity. What opportunity had there been?

But I had no time then for idle speculation. From the left-hand pocket of his trousers, Colt took out a coil of brown leather strap. It had a buckle at the end—the kind of strap used on trunks. I noticed that the strap had recently been wet.

"What's that for?" rumbled Dougherty, ogling the strap suspiciously.

"You will take this down to Doctor Moolooker," resumed Colt crisply. "Tell him I want it turned over for a laboratory analysis. Also have that strand of hair identified as belonging to Christine."

"And the frame?" I prompted.

Colt smiled at the framed picture as at an old friend.

"You are to take the picture," he added. "To Mr. Gavin, the telegraph manager in Headquarters. Tell him I want that picture sent to Mr. Dupont, head of the Paris police force tonight—by telephoto. Clear?"

"Clear, chief!"

"When you are through, Tony," John Dougherty and me at my house!"

Cataract, Eye Affliction, Cured by Simple Operation

This Optic Condition, Commonly Met in Old Age, Can Now Be Removed Without Danger; Don't Delay If Surgery Has Been Advised.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
 United States Senator from New York.
 Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WITHIN recent years a great deal of scientific research has been devoted to discovering the cause and prevention of cataract. As yet, the cause is unknown. Most authorities believe that the disease is brought about by some chemical change within the eye. It is usually associated with advancing years. As we grow older, deposits of opaque material may occur in the crystalline lens of the eye. This condition produces a haziness of the vision in the afflicted eye.

Cataract is most commonly seen in old age, although it may occur in the young, at birth even. It is often seen accompanying certain general diseases. It is exceedingly common in elderly people suffering from diabetes.

It may follow the taking of certain poisons, such as ergot and naphthalin. They interfere somehow in the nutrition of the lens of the eye. The accumulated poisons attack this delicate structure.

Cataract may occur as the result of a blow or other injury to the eye. This is called "traumatic cataract." In this type the haziness is due to a rupture of the capsule of the eye. This break permits the watery fluid within the eyeball to enter the crystalline lens, producing cloudiness. Immediate medical attention is necessary in an accident of this sort.

The Daily Horoscope.

Friday, Sept. 16, 1932

Mingled good and bad planetary influences are discerned for today, according to astrology.

Much publicity will be given to divorces, assaults and ill-treatment of women in the eastern section of the United States. In Germany serious difficulties and danger of defeat or some time in power, or a general election may take place. The people will be discontented or excited, and the ruler will be troubled. Mysterious crimes are likely to take place in Chicago and vicinity.

The aspects during the day are inauspicious for important undertakings; the influences are disruptive, and affairs transacted today should be done with due regard to conventional methods. The rights of others should not be overlooked. Not a good time to act hastily, nor to change plans.

People born in October, January, July and April are likely to experience physical exhaustion. Impulse and lack of caution will bring about accidents today. Avoid X-ray and radium treatments; extra precaution should be exercised by electricians, autoists, railroad people and radio people. Not a good day to have advertisements appear for radios, electric appliances and electrical treatments.

During the afternoon hours people may be too receptive to influences which are likely to be more seductive than sincere. Do not take too much for granted. Careful discrimination is needed to avoid losses and troubles. Proposals will be presented that are ineffectual, and any chances taken will be a gambler's chance. Be careful with strangers. Schemes and dishonest people will be out for victims. Do not depend upon luck. Do nothing important today. Physicians should be careful with anaesthetics.

Children born on this day, will be inclined to depend upon the element of luck. Should be taught to discriminate between the real and the false.

Francis Parkman, American historian, was born on this date. Among other stars have celebrated it as a birthday include James J. Hill, American railway capitalist and Henry A. Macaulay, Astrologer.

VETERAN VOTE

was directly drawn. The Legion opposed American entry into the court. The Republican platform favored adherence. The Democratic platform was silent.

On war debts, the legionnaires protested against any reduction or cancellation. So did the Democratic platform but the Republican platform was silent on the subject.

ONLY DEMOCRAT

The Legion's stand on these issues, as compared to the two major party platforms, might be regarded as a series of unusual coincidences, were it not for the election of Johnson as national commander. He was the only Democrat in the race when balloting started, his Democratic opponents withdrawing earlier. Six Republicans, George W. Malone, of Nevada; Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., of California; Edward A. Hayes, of Illinois; Earl V. Cliff, of Minnesota; William Stern, of North Dakota; and Raymond Field, of Oklahoma, comprised the opposition.

Johnson won by a margin of 35 votes. He was assured of victory when Massachusetts, with 49 votes, dropped Malone at 3 o'clock in the morning to join his standard. His winning total also included 28 votes from Kansas, ten from North Carolina and 11 from the District of Columbia.

WILLIAMSPORT

FAREWELL SERMON The M. E. church was filled almost to capacity on Sunday morning when Rev. Clarence Swearingen preached his farewell sermon. Rev. Swearingen will this week move to Wheelersburg to his new charge.

His congregation here and the community in general are much grieved at his departure. Rev. Swearingen has so successfully served this charge for the past four years, and during this time has made a host of friends.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT

An orchestra composed of Columbus friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnson, gave an excellent concert at their home here Sunday evening. About 60 were present to enjoy the delightful and unusual occasion. A number of Columbus friends, aside from the orchestra, were present. The Williamsport guests included:

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunlap and family, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap, Sr. and Mrs. George P. Hunsicker, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Gehart, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Smith and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Betts, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Luellen and daughter, Mary Alice, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Heiskell and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevenson, Harry McGhee and daughter Betty, Mrs. C. E. Hill and daughter, Helen, Mrs. M. W. Newhouse, Miss Laura McGhee, Mrs. Mae Bazzore, Billy Johnson and the host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hunsicker were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mader and family of Circleville. A number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Alkire were their guests Sunday.

All the children are to meet in front of the Cliftona at 12:30 o'clock. There will be prizes awarded to the dogs-but just imagine the homeliest dog will receive the first prize, and then there will be three other prizes. To make the kiddie club more interesting the management will offer two feature pictures, also comedies. Saturday will be the big day as there will be a pie eating contest, and a big candy bar will be given to each child.

Rehearsals have been held all this week and Miss Kennedy is confident the presentation will be one of the best ever shown here.

PALM, TROUTMAN ENTERTAIN MEN

Carl Palm and Gladden Troutman entertained the Lutheran men Thursday night with a variety of imitations.

They began as the Morin Sisters singing "Barnacle Bill the Sailor." They went through a real program of entertainment, appearing as melody boys, as crooners. Palm played his musical saw and Troutman his violin. They played mandolin, guitar; each sang solos; Palm played the xylophone and Troutman impersonated "Cohen on the Telephone" and Fritz in "Little Jacob Strouse."

It was a lively evening that everyone enjoyed. Dan Eitel and his committee served sandwiches and coffee.

The next meeting on Oct. 13 will be a "Father and Son" evening with a fish fry. C. L. Mack will be toastmaster and J. D. Hummel head cook. Everyone is asked to announce themselves before Thursday.

VETERAN VOTE

was directly drawn. The Legion opposed American entry into the court. The Republican platform favored adherence. The Democratic platform was silent.

On war debts, the legionnaires protested against any reduction or cancellation. So did the Democratic platform but the Republicans were silent on the subject.

ONLY DEMOCRAT

The Legion's stand on these issues, as compared to the two major party platforms, might be regarded as a series of unusual coincidences, were it not for the election of Johnson as national commander. He was the only Democrat in the race when balloting started, his Democratic opponents withdrawing earlier. Six Republicans, George W. Malone, of Nevada; Frank N. Belgrano, Jr., of California; Edward A. Hayes, of Illinois; Earl V. Cliff, of Minnesota; William Stern, of North Dakota; and Raymond Field, of Oklahoma, comprised the opposition.

Johnson won by a margin of 35 votes. He was assured of victory when Massachusetts, with 49 votes, dropped Malone at 3 o'clock in the morning to join his standard. His winning total also included 28 votes from Kansas, ten from North Carolina and 11 from the District of Columbia.

WILLIAMSPORT

FAREWELL SERMON

The M. E. church was filled almost to capacity on Sunday morning when Rev. Clarence Swearingen preached his farewell sermon. Rev. Swearingen will this week move to Wheelersburg to his new charge.

His congregation here and the community in general are much grieved at his departure. Rev. Swearingen has successfully served this charge for the past four years, and during this time has made a host of friends.

SUNDAY EVENING CONCERT
An orchestra composed of Columbus friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Johnson, gave an excellent concert at their home here Sunday evening. About 60 were present to enjoy the delightful and unusual occasion. A number of Columbus friends, aside from the orchestra were present. The Williamsport guests included:

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunlap and family, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Dunlap, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. George F. Hunsicker, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Gephart, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Smith and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Betts, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Luellen and daughter, Mary Alice, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Heiskell and family, Mr. and Mrs. William Stevenson, Harry McGhee and daughter, Betty, Mrs. C. E. Hill and daughter, Helen, Mrs. M. W. Newhouse, Miss Laure McGhee, Mrs. Mae Bazzore, Billy Johnson and the host and hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hunsicker were Sunday afternoon visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mader and family of Circleville.

A number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Alkire were their guests Sunday.

All the children are to meet in front of the Cliftona at 12:30 o'clock.

There will be prizes awarded to the dogs-but just imagine the homeliest dog will receive the first prize, and then there will be three other prizes. To make the kiddie club more interesting the management will offer two feature pictures, also comedies. Saturday will be the big day as there will be a pie eating contest, and a big candy bar will be given to each child.
